However, following the proclamation of the FCC Act 2023 on March 29, 2024, this strategy was undermined. The new legislation triggered a significant increase in Police referrals, which were completed and advanced to the Further Investigation (FI) stage. The overall target for PI completed case was not achieved as a significant number of cases were investigated leading to FI instead of investigation into the forecasted PI completed cases. |

Solar energy has known an exponential expansion.In addition, planned RE projects of 130MW awarded to 2 promoters in 2022 and expected to be commissioned in 2024, suffered major delays due to permitting issues. 50 out of 130MW started construction after financial closure in 2025. Furthermore, the total energy generation (denominator) has encountered a major increase from 3326 GWh to 3468 GWh for the same period, hence further reducing the overall percentage contribution of RE. |

Further, the cumulative rainfall for last summer was below normal and as a result, water availability for irrigation was reduced. This situation has affected food crops production in protected cultures especially in the North which is very reliant on irrigation. |

Although the number of infant deaths increased slightly from 159 to 162, the infant mortality rate declined from 13.4 to 12.7 per 1,000 live births, reflecting an overall improvement from the previous year. The rate remains only marginally above the target of 12.5, indicating that while further efforts are needed to fully meet the target, notable progress has been achieved in reducing infant mortality.                                                                                                                                                                                             |
